

Abstract

A method and apparatus are provided for protecting the health and safety of an authorized user. The method includes the steps of monitoring a vital sign of the authorized user via a portable sensor attached to and carried by the authorized user and automatically calling for help using a radio frequency channel when the monitored vital sign exceeds a threshold value.